Ramiro Berardo is Associate Professor of Environmental and Natural Resources Policy at the School of Environment and Natural Resources. His work focuses on collaborative governance and the study of complex policy making processes. In 2021 he wrote, produced and directed And Water For All, a feature-length documentary on water access and affordability in Ohio to be released on World Water Day 2022. Dr. Berardo's presentation will cover his motivations to create the film, the challenges the production team faced during the process of filming and editing the movie, and the advantages and disadvantages for academics of branching out into the production of knowledge through "non-traditional" academic media.
