In light of COVID-19 and the need to reduce population density and maintain physical distancing, the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences Career Development Office has made the decision to hold all career events virtually during the upcoming Fall semester. This applies to career fairs, all on-campus interviews for students with hiring organizations, as well as employer info sessions.

The health and well-being of our students, employers, staff, faculty, and the university community continues to be our top priority.

This decision was not made lightly and was informed by several factors including:

- the health and safety of all involved with our activities
- providing equal access to those students who choose not to return to campus during the upcoming semester
- it is still unclear if the Career Development Office staff will be back on campus or continue to work remotely
- numerous companies who have already indicated they will conduct their recruiting virtually
- the confidence in our capabilities to offer these services virtually given our existing platforms and successes in offering needed services to students and prospective employers over the past few months
- similar decisions also made by the Colleges of Engineering, Business, Arts and Sciences, and Buckeye Careers (Student Life), among others.
